

"He just couldn't understand why I was so grossed out. Todd Raine was my lab partner and we were dissecting frogs. He'd pull things out of that frog that I couldn't believe. Parts and all, guts and everything. And he described each little thing he pulled out. Oh, there's such and such, it must be a girl frog. It looked bad enough without him describing every little part. It smelled bad too."

—Nancy Sumner